Unveiling Conscious Computing: Cultivating AI Self-awareness for Human-Like Thought and Sensibility This paper explores conscious computing—the integration of self-awareness and ethical decision-making in AI. It examines the implications of giving machines human-like awareness, the ethical risks involved, and the limited progress in AI self-awareness. Through real-world case studies, it analyzes accountability, bias, privacy, and social impact, advocating for responsible development and further research across diverse data. The study emphasizes evaluating AI intelligence based on foundational definitions rather than human standards. DOI: https://doi.org/10.1007/978-981-97-6678-9$_1$5

EXTRA-CURRICULAR ACTIVITIES

- Designing Skills: Provided creative designs for Model United Nations (MUNs), hackathon companies, and research conferences, contributing to visually appealing and impactful event branding.

- Management Skills: Part of a management team, successfully organized and managed over 15 hackathons, meetups, and conferences, ensuring smooth execution and engagement.

- Poetry/Writing: Passionate about writing poetry and creative pieces in my free time, using words to express emotions, ideas, and perspectives.

LEADERSHIP

- Event Organizer: Successfully led the organization of large-scale hackathons and research conferences, ensuring seamless event execution and fostering participant engagement.

- Team Lead: Guided cross-functional teams in developing innovative solutions during hackathons and projects, demonstrating strong decision-making and collaboration skills.
